

Railway Museum

The Living Railway Museum is run by a youth organisation which maintains and preserves old trains (AJECTA). It is housed in a former locomotive hangar in Longueville, near the current railway station. It was first installed in 1971, with AJECTA showcasing rolling stock.

Over time and by dint of acquiring and restoring trains, the warehouse became a museum. It benefitted from restoration work on the rotunda, performed in several stages, and backed by the French Heritage foundation. On 19 June 2008, the back of the railway rotunda in Longueville was inaugurated.

Ever since the first acquisitions of 130 B 476 and 040 TA 137 in 1971 through to the 230 D 116 and 030 T 8157 which arrived in 2009, the Longueville Living Railway Museum has housed the greatest collection of steam locomotives in France.

Round trip taking in the Longueville viaduct
